

Liz fashions own story

BUSINESSWOMAN, environmentalist, fashionista.

Liz Davenport, after 40 years in the Australian fashion industry, launched her contemporary autobiography Liz: A Life of Colour at the brand's Toowong store last week.

"I call it a contemporary autobiography because while it is about my life it only talks about the things that relate to the fashion journey. It's no Fifty Shades of Grey," Ms Davenport said.

She described the book as being about business, image, humanitarian contribution and sticking to your guns.

"It's about a fashion designer who did things differently," she said.

The book also outlines Ms Davenport's Theory of Multiplicity which describes how to choose your wardrobe to maximise outfit combinations.
